Liferay Portal is the leading open-source enterprise portal framework that uses Java and Web 2.0 technologies. Web portals often function as a point of access to information on the World Wide Web. Web portals, such as Yahoo!, present information from diverse sources in a unified way. Aside from the search engine standard, web portals offer other services such as e-mail, news, stock prices, infotainment, and various other features. Portals provide a means for enterprises to supply a consistent look and feel with access control and procedures for multiple applications that otherwise would have been separate entities altogether. So, how do developers bring existing applications, as well as integrate content management systems and search engines, into a portal? And how do developers get started with the Liferay Portal engine? In Practical Liferay: Java-based Portal Applications Development, Dr. Poornachandra Sarang answers these questions and

My Bucket List provides more than 100 pages to create a memorable bucket list.

Included on each page are templates to write down the bucket list titles, the reason the bucket list item is important, what is needed to accomplish the bucket list item, the date and place that the bucket list is completed, and the moments that will never be forgotten. As each template is completed, a collection of bucket list items will create a book of living memories.
